MRS. HARRISON'S TROUSSEAU.

MRS. HARRISON'S TROUSSEAU.

IN Mrs. Harrison's trousseau is a carriage gown in a pale tint of gray, of fine enrows grenadine, striped with fine satin bars, and made in Marie Antoinetto design. The full jabot revers which it has are bordered with shaded galloon, in metal effects, studied with varicolored jewels, and these cross over a bouffant drapery of applique lace. The collar and girdle are of old rose velvet. This gown is matched with a Henry III cape, slashed over the sheadlers and trimmed at the throat with full ruchings of white chiffon and a small numoniere." which resembles a small maff trimmed with a cluster of pink roses. A most beautiful "sortie de ba" is of gray chevlot, lined throughout with salmon pink silk. The full hood is bordered with ruchings of pale pink chiffon and cascades of the same chiffon from the front. A gem in the collection is a pompadour dinner gown, the bodice made of white mousseline de sole, embroidered in large raised butterflies of bronze and gold tints, touched with color. The arrangement of the short sleeves suggests a winged butterfly. The skirt to match this is of white pompadour satin. An "oriental" gown, which cannot fail of being becoming to the brunette beauty of the wearer, is of white crepe de chine, finished with pointed yoke girdle and stock collar of jeweled passementeric of rich coloring. The broad hem of the plain skirt is outlined with a narrow beading of turquoise jewels and gold cord.
